"We tried that, and the Sheriff at first consented, but afterwards said he could not take the responsibility."

More Power for Subpoena-Servers.

After some more discussion the Committee consulted together and Chairman Lescow announced that he had been authorized by the Committee to request the Sheriff to issue subpoenas to the members of the Committee with power as deputy sheriffs.

"In justice to Capt. O'Connor," said Mr. Goff, "I would state that he offered to send out an officer in plain clothes to the precinct, but it is hardly necessary to say we declined the offer with thanks," added Mr. Goff, sarcastically.

The first witness called was Chief Clerk Kipp, of the Police Department, who brought with him a list of all the complaints, charges and specifications for the Police Department since June 1 last, together with the disposition of each case.

Mr. Goff said he had asked Major Kipp to make out this list to show what charges had been made against the members of the Committee with power as deputy sheriffs.

The first name he read was that of Patrolman Jeremiah S. Levy, who was charged with carrying a gun while on duty. The charge was still pending.

Mr. Parkhurst had arrived during the early part of the proceedings, and took a seat near the Committee's counsel.

Mr. Goff explained the substance of the charge against Levy, who was charged with carrying a gun while on duty. The charge was still pending.

Wardman John Hook came next on the list, and was charged with carrying a gun while on duty. The charge was still pending.

blasting for the New York Central road in Fordham.

"Did you ever have any relations with a policeman named Robert Higgins?" asked Mr. Goff.

"I don't know whether that was his name, but I know I had some dealings with a policeman."

Mr. Carpenter went on to say that while he was blasting at Fordham, two years ago, he had some very rough men about him, and that he had been threatened with violence by them.

"Not long after that another officer came to see us at the mine, and asked if we were doing anything for the police. We said we did not know that it was necessary, and he replied it was customary."

"I talked the matter over with my brother, and the result was that I paid $100 in an envelope and gave it to the book-keeper to give to the officer when he came."

"What did you give $100 for?"

"Well, we had to deal with a good many rough characters, and we wanted police protection."

"If one of your foremen arrested for blasting in a manner not allowed by law, I don't think so, I heard of a man being arrested, but I don't think it was for that."

"Did you swear before the Grand Jury that one of your foremen was arrested and that officer Higgins told you that you would do the right thing?"

"Yes, I recall now, I did swear to something like that," said Mr. Carpenter.

"The witness said he understood the expression 'right thing' to mean that the officer would do the right thing."

"What suggested $20 as the right thing?"

"I think it was one of the foremen at the works suggested it."

Meant Capt. Stephenson, He Says.

"There is an error in the report which reads Capt. S. S. What does that refer to?"

"I suppose that's the money we paid for our police protection."

"Who was Captain?"

"The officer who was with me, I think it was Capt. Stephenson," admitted the witness.

"After a great deal of squirming and wriggling, Mr. Carpenter admitted that he had paid the police in the Fordham district, and that he was, and secondly to secure the good will of the police."

He said he paid $20 every month to one officer or another, and that he never paid more than $20 at a time.

Justice Voorhis Holds the Prisoners Ignored by Hogan.

Simms Also Says the Superintendent Is Right.

Whatever the opinion of the liquor dealers and those who sympathize with them may be with regard to whether yesterday was an unusually "dry" Sunday, or not, it is certain that Sup't. Byrne is feeling happy over the results.

The returns turned in to the Superintendent this morning show a total of 108 arrests for violation of the Excise law. This number exceeds the total for the previous three days, and makes a grand total of 382 since the crusade began.

Most of the arrests were made Sunday afternoon. The work of the police was directed by the Superintendent from Police Headquarters, who remained at his office all of the day and late in the night. When asked about the results he remarked:

"My action should be self-explanatory. I don't believe that it was a 'dry' Sunday."

JOHN E. GOING IT ALONE.

It Is Expected that He Will Roast Kerwin in His Convention.

The County Convention of the Millhollands, which will be held to-night, promises to be as lively a gathering as any witnessed in this city in some time.

There have been so many desertions from the ranks of the Kerwin campaign that the Republican State Convention that those who are left do not seem to know what to do.

It will be fun to hear the denunciation that will be heaped upon the head of John E. Going, who has quit the organization, as everybody except Millholland said months ago he would do.

The Commissioner is charged with having deliberately tried to capsize the Kerwin campaign in the interest of Platt, and it is said he was actually instructed by the Thoma chief, John E. Going, to do so.

All this and more is likely to be brought to light to-night, and Millholland intends putting up a puzzle to everybody.
